

Ben Blaschke: First of all Brian, you are very much a modern globalist in that you consult to a number of large corporations from a range of sectors all around the world. Can you provide a bit more detail on your role?

Dr Brian To: As a strategist and a practice professor for more than 20 years I have the pleasure and privilege of working on complex situations in different sectors of industry, government and various leading institutions around the globe. I work in a number of countries and am privileged enough to consult and to teach a range of organizations where I focus largely on issues such as culture, diversity and the effects of culture and diversity on productivity.

Working in several countries simultaneously for these past decades has made me even more appreciative and respectful of the importance of community, human dignity and human performance and the need for collaboration in all work – from assisting in developing national competitiveness models to developing global growth strategies for corporations.

I'm grateful for the opportunity to be involved and to be able to bring the three key essential key drivers to all of the projects I work on – namely innovation, competitiveness and behavioural science.

本思齊: 你為全球不同業界的大型企業擔任顧問，可謂當代全球性策略家。可否解釋一下你扮演的角色？

Brian To博士: 作為策略家及實踐型教授，我有幸在過往20多年間，為全球各地的企業、政府以及頂尖機構處理各種複雜的問題。我在不同的國家工作，並有幸在多間組織裡擔任顧問及任教，其中以文化、多元性以及兩者對生產力的影響等為重點主題。

對於有機會參與並將三大關鍵要素——即創新、競爭力及行為科學——應用到我負責的項目，我感到十分榮幸。