Many companies grow fast in economic booms with unique products and attractive marketing strategies. Their booming period may last for five to 10 years. However, some of them don't prepare sufficiently for turning points in economics cycles. They over-expand themselves before a peak and therefore find it hard to collect debts from their customers and be provided additional loans from banks in a recession period.

Finally, they sell off their business and even go bankrupt. Predicting the exact turning points seems difficult, however statistics from history provide clues on interval estimates of economic cycles. A company should prepare itself for countercyclical corporate strategies 4.3 years after the last trough or 5.4 years after the last peak. If the company is cash-rich in economic downturns, it should acquire assets and expand business at the trough which tends to occur one to 1.5 years after the last peak. 📊
